UNIT 4: TENSES

In English, there are simple tenses, progressive tenses, and perfect tenses.

The time of an action or a state will decide the form of the verb in a sentence. In English, the verb forms show different tenses.

	Present	Past	Future
Simple tenses	Present simple tense I work She works	Past simple tense I worked She worked	Future simple tense I will work She will work
Progressive tenses	Present progressive tense I am working She is working	Past progressive tense I was working She was working	Future progressive tense I will be working She will be working
Perfect tenses	Present perfect tense I have worked She has worked	Past perfect tense I had worked She had worked	Future perfect tense I will have worked She will have worked

1 The Past Perfect Tense

quá khứ hoàn thành

The Past Perfect tense (had + past participle) is used to talk about an action which happened before a specific time in the past. Generally it describes:

before, after, by the time, already

1) An action before another action in the past

- When we arrived at the station, they had already departed.
  → They had already departed before we arrived.
- She said that she had bought a house located near the company.
  → She had bought it before the time of speaking.

2) A continuous progress until a specific time in the past. This is used to describe an event happening for a period of time prior to a fixed time in the past.

- He had been sick for two weeks when the doctor came to visit.
  → He had been sick for two weeks before the doctor came.

2 The Past Simple Tense

The Past Simple tense is used to talk about an action, a state, or an experience in the past. Common adverbs of time used with the Past Simple tense are yesterday, ago, last, in 1987, then, at that time, etc.

- The office equipment became completely operational three days ago.

3 The Present Perfect Tense

The Present Perfect tense (have + past participle) is used to talk about events in the past that still have an effect on the present moment. Generally it describes:

1) An action which completed right at the present time

- I have just finished arranging tables and chairs outside.

2) A progress which began in the past and continues to the present time. This is often used with the following sentence patterns:

❶ since + a definite time in the past/since + subject + verb in a past tense

- The company has been in trouble since last year's ground-breaking ceremony.
- I've been working on the project since I was promoted.

❷ for (the last/past) + a period of time

- Profits have steadily increased for the last few years.

3) An experience up to the present time. This is often used with adverbs such as before, ever, never, or [~ times]. since, already, yet, just, for, recently, lately

- I have seen him twice before.
- We have never done any volunteer work.

4 The Present Simple Tense

The Present Simple tense is used to talk about general facts, conditions, habits or routines at the present time. S + V(s/es)
S + do/does not + V
Do/Does + S + V ?

An -s/-es is added to the base form of the verb when the subject is a singular third person. The Present Simple tense is often used with adverbs of frequency such as usually, sometimes, or always. often, every day/week/month, generally, regularly

- Libraries usually charge a fee for the late return of books.
- The speaker sometimes gives a lecture in the auditorium.

5 The Future Tenses

be + going to: có kế hoạch trước will: xác định ngày lúc nói

Future tenses (will/[be going to] + base form of the verb) are used to talk about actions that will happen in the future. The Future tenses are often used with the following expressions:

in the future
in the near future
soon shortly

tomorrow	next + time	in + time	at the end of this year

- My supervisor promises that I will get a raise at the beginning of next year.
