1 Coordinating Conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions are words that link words, phrases, or clauses of equal importance. Typical coordinating conjunctions are and and or.

1) Joining words

- Employees are asked to be efficient and creative.

adjective + and + adjective

2) Joining phrases

- People usually commute by bus or on foot.

phrase + or + phrase

3) Joining clauses

- Mr. Sierto began a new study and I started sorting documents.

independent clause + and + independent clause

2 Correlative Conjunctions

Correlative conjunctions come in pair, thanks to which one can be inferred from the other. TOEIC test questions often ask to identify the other conjunction of a correlative pair.

1) both A and B = A and B alike

- The instructional video was enjoyed by both adults and children.

2) not only A but (also) B

- Not only management but also employees are aware of the importance.

3) either A or B

- The last shipment will arrive either today or tomorrow.

4) neither A nor B

- Neither my supervisor nor her assistants are responsible for the faults.

3 Prepositions vs. Conjunctions of Cause/Reason

1) Conjunctions of cause/reason

because/as/since/[now that] + Subject + Verb

2) Prepositions of cause/reason

[because of]/[owing to]/[thanks to]/[due to] + Noun/Gerund

- Because of noise from the construction site, I can't focus on my study.

3) Conjunctive adverbs of result

Conjunctive adverbs of result such as hence, therefore, consequently, and thus introduce the result of an action or event expressed earlier. These adverbs are often used in the following pattern:

Sentence/Clause + Conjunctive Adverb/Coordinating Conjunction + Sentence/Clause

- I have checked the list carefully and thus there should be no mistakes.
- Ms. Peterson was fired last week; therefore, she is looking for a job.

4 Prepositions vs. Conjunctions of Contrast and Concession

1) Conjunctions of concession

Although/[Even though]/Though + Subject + Verb
While + Subject + Verb

- Although he is right, I don't still trust him.

2) Prepositions of concession

[In spite of]/Despite + Noun Phrase

- In spite of the heavy rain, this fund-raising concert took place outdoors.

3) Conjunctive adverbs of contrast

Conjunctive adverbs of contrast such as however, nevertheless, and nonetheless are used to show contrast. These adverbs should only be used in the following pattern:

Sentence/Clause + Conjunctive Adverb/Coordinating Conjunction + Sentence/Clause

- Sales representatives explained the function of the machine; however, customers didn't listen carefully.
- He heard the bad news; nonetheless, he decided to invest in the project.

- Liên từ + Mệnh đề
